

Life Science

Hylant's life science practice has extensive expertise in tailoring unique risk management solutions that respond to the changing exposures life science organizations face every day.

The complexity of bringing a product or service to market in the life science industry has grown exponentially over the past decade. Today, expansion of regulatory compliance, stricter FDA regulations, and widespread litigation are just a few of the obstacles that must be navigated.

Our experienced advisors provide organizations with a comprehensive analysis of current coverage in order to uncover gaps and potential exposure. We then collaborate to develop a customized solution that manages risks, reduces operating costs and improves efficiencies.

Hylant's life science services include:

- Exclusive insurance carrier relationships dedicated to the life science industry
- Contract review and recommendations
- Protocol and informed consent consultation
- Risk management and loss control services
- Domestic and international capabilities
- Proprietary technology to collect, manage and distribute exposure information

With the complexity of these programs and the ever-changing environment, it is more important than ever to trust a broker and advisor who not only understands the industry, but knows your business goals and organizational culture.
